We cannot, as a country, have large corporations being the only ones with extremely fast internet speeds. It will kill smaller businesses, the foundation of our once great country, which is now slowly becoming a land of the very rich and the very poor. Net neutrality helps hundreds of millions, while getting rid of it would help a very small percentage of very wealthy people. If you want to ensure our country's continuing decline, by all means, say goodbye to net neutrality. But when your grandchildren and their children are working some minimum wage job trying desperately to get out of corporate America's stranglehold on our population, know that it is only your fault for passing such an absurd and corrupt law to only benefit the already very wealthy in an attempt to make them wealthier. What happened to helping the real people in America? I will lose all respect for the FCC if net neutrality is no more.
