

7521329235.txt

Broadband carriers are treating the internet as something that only people with higher incomes should have access too. They need to be reclassified and treated as telecommunications services. Internet information services should remain unregulated and fairly priced. The monopolies need to be stopped and healthy business competition needs to be restored.