

7521331387.txt

The internet must stay neutral. The two speed lines is horrible no matter how you phrase it. Allowing a company or service to pay a premium for "faster" delivery is data discrimination and is a step in the direction of censorship, making certain information less accessible than others. It must not be done, and any public official who can't see how destructive this idea is, should not be in office.