

7521331716.txt

I see no reason to continue to enforce puritanical regulations on television broadcasts. If people have a problem with the content on their televisions, they are free not to watch. Censorship does not help us in the advancement of the arts, the improvement of human thought, or developing a communal relationship as a society. As such, all frivolous complaints, such as those issued regarding Michael Sam's kiss on television, should be immediately dismissed.