

FCC,

What the Cable companies are proposing is an affront to the open marketplace. The internet is one of the last ways small businesses and entrepreneurs can compete with business giants. Just think of the massive amount of successful startups that happened on the even playing field that is the Internet. I know that if you approve this change to the law, I along with many other people will find it an atrocious act by my government. You have one job in my opinion and that is to make sure that my media is unfettered by the corrupting influences that right now are threatening it. I do not want the people who have the most money to be able to have megaphones and drown out all the other competitors trying to gain a presence, thereby turning the Internet into a forest of monopolies.

If you need any other clarification as to why this idea would be unforgivable, please watch John Oliver's comments on the matter as he puts it just right

http://www.youtube.com/watch?feature=player\_embedded&v=fpbOEoRrHyU