For the last 10 months, I have been caregiver to my 90 year old mother. She watches RFD-TV to listen to the gospel and country music programs aired. She used to attend local gospel jubilee events at churches, but she cannot see to drive at night anymore. Also, when gas prices surged, most of the local jubilees were cancelled due to cost for people to travel to attend.

Mom is quite feeble and unable to get out much. She is also on an extremely low fixed income. She never fails to turn on RFD-TV to listen to those music programs, which she looks forward to every week. If she loses that station, it will take a great deal of pleasure away from her. Since I have been her caregiver and she introduced me to RFD, we have enjoyed listening to the programs together. Mom does not have the income to pay for upgrades to the cable service she does receive. Therefore, I beg you to take into consideration the enjoyment viewers get while watching family-oriented programs on RFD with basic cable/satellite service. Please do not let RFD programming disappear if these companies merge or force low income households to pay extra to receive this programming.
