I am really concerned that with the mergers of Comcast and Time Warner Cable, and DirectTV and AT&T, the independent RFDTV channel will be taken off the air even though it has millions of dedicated viewers. Rural America may be in the minority when it comes to population density but its impact on the American economy is far greater than the numbers would suggest. It is only fair that RFDTV have a voice nationally and it shouldn't have to fight to keep just one channel on the air.

It sounds to me that monopolies are taking over our airways.
