

7521346082.txt

The internet is the one true open and equal forum in the world today. It is an equal playing field that allows start-ups from very modest beginnings to take on large establishment organizations and be truly competitive. This is the very essence of the kind of competitions that a capitalist society should embrace.

Creating a two tiered internet would be disastrous and change the dynamic of the internet, killing its ability to foster start-ups and grassroots efforts. The example of Comcast tanking the download speeds of Netflix earlier this year demonstrates exactly what will happen if we go down this path. This sort of behavior should not be allowed.