

7521346962.txt

The internet was designed in part by ARPA as a way to spread information between their disparate facilities. From its conception, the internet has always been about the freedom of sharing information. Unless you completely enforce net neutrality and protect our access to information, the companies will attempt to pull as much money out of it as they can. There is not enough competition in telecommunications to protect the consumers. Therefore, it is your RESPONSIBILITY to protect us.

In the 1700s, America had one of the most effective Postal service in the world. This postal service helped distribute newspapers. It was these newspapers that told people about the injustices of the British government.

Spreading information has always helped America, doing anything to limit the spread of speech is unpatriotic.