As a cryptographer and computer scientist, the open source initiative is absolutely central in my life. The free flow of information is what allows my field to exist and to thrive, and my experience in the last 20 years of my existence has mostly demonstrated that the same is true of pretty much everything else. The connections we are forging as a society are catapulting us into a technological revolution, and net neutrality is a core piece of that revolution. Without it we will stagnate. Don't let that happen.
