

7521347729.txt

The internet has always been a level playing field for large and small entities alike, and it should remain a neutral territory. Companies and individuals with plenty of money can already buy their way to the forefront of our attention in so many ways; an internet fastlane should not be one of those ways. Otherwise, startups will never even get a fair chance to be viewed and judged on their own merit. Please support our core American values of equal opportunity, free speech, and free markets - by protecting net neutrality.