

7521347873.txt

There are many issues more pressing which also don't stifle competition and innovation. Government intervention should be focused on ensuring internet access for all and affordably for those with lesser means, not regulating ways for providers to profit from and continue to monopolize a basic utility.