Allowing telecommunication companies to charge more money for the "express" delivery of content will be the catalyst for legalized racketeering. To believe that those who don't pay the "express" fee (aka bribe) will not be penalized by said companies with lower speed of content delivery is naive. This stifles innovation and hinders the ability of smaller corporations to compete in a free market. Show America that Comcast cannot buy laws. Show America that their government is still interested in protecting its citizens.
