The FCC needs to stop considering these new insane rules that will end the internet as we know it. You can stop the lies that nothing will be different because many of us know that you are lying. These new rules will allow the telecom monopolies to blackmail bigger corporations forcing them to pay more for faster speeds while the rest of, along with new start up companies, are stuck with slow speeds because we can't afford/refuse to pay their blackmail fees. These companies already enjoy monopoly status - I don't have any options - I have ONE broadband carrier and if I want internet I must use them and pay whatever they say I must pay. These services need to be treated as public utilities! They need to be heavily regulated to ensure everyone has equal and affordable access to the internet. In the same way I have no option about who provides my water or electric, those utilities are regulated to ensure they do NOT over charge the customers who have no other options. The same should be done with the telecoms. There is no other choice. Your plan just gives them more power, something they do not need or deserve. Stop trying to kill net neutrality and start doing your damn job and regulate these telecom monopolies like the public utilities they are.
