Allowing a few corporations to decide who gets fast Internet speeds and who gets slow Internet speeds is not a good idea. Allowing the foxes to guard the hen house, allowing them to charge companies extra dollars to ensure adequate speeds, meaning, I will get charged more for the same service I have now just frustrates me to no end. Net neutrality is one of the best regulations to ever come out of Washington. Please, please, please keep net neutrality in place and ignore the millions being spent by the cable companies to bilk us out of billions with no additional benefit, except to line their pockets. We already have some of the highest costs for the slowest speeds on the planet.
