Net neutrality is important to me because this country's government is supposed to exist for all its citizens. When you take away everyone's ability to spread information and ideas, you fundamentally destroy the country it's founded on. America was not created so a non-human entity could line the pockets of its fucked-up hivemind workers at the expense of everyone else's ability to disseminate and access information. Why do you CEOs think you need more money than any one person could spend in a lifetime?
Remember, all of our graves are the same size.
