

7521361574.txt

The start-up business I work for gets the majority of its sales from the internet, and allowing providers to dictate what sites have faster load times would put us at a severe disadvantage compared to many of the large companies we compete with. The function of the internet has become one of major commerce, and I believe it should be treated as a public utility to ensure fair access for everyone.