If net neutrality goes away free speech rights are going to take a major hit as well. And the groups most affected will have their ability to protest affected.

If for example I wanted to protest something president Obama wrote into law I have the right to drive to DC and protest. The president has no right to walk over to the people protesting and tell them to be quiet. But if net neutrality goes away cable companies can and will do that (they already did it to netflix). If you speak out against them in a website... Bam now your site runs slower.

Equal access to the net is a basic human right, don't take that away.
