

7521363030.txt

The privatization of valuable resources is already out of control in this country, the internet despite being provided by private companies, is a largely public network, where access to sites only depends on your service provider, not which company owns the site. The fact that these mega-companies are literally the only people anti Net Neutrality should speak volumes about what people want. I'm not a huge internet person, but the internet shouldn't be governed by the voices of few, it should be governed by the people actually using it.