Dear FCC,

While I respect your organizations constant commitment to keeping certain words off of television, I am upset with your recent actions regarding "net neutrality." This is clearly giving a leg-up to certain companies which are already nearing monopoly status (increased due to that Comcast, TWC merge). One of the fundamental purposes of government is to prevent monopolies and to protect free enterprise. As a regulatory agency, I feel that you are failing in your task. No doubt in part because of the presence of Tom Wheeler as your chairman, concretizing your position as a member of a circle-jerk, rather than a respectable agency. I dearly hope that Tom hits his head on the revolving door, much like Justin Bieber in that one youtube video that isn't loading fast enough (yet I do not in any way plan on causing physical harm to any member of the FCC or anyone else). In short, please screw yourselves rather than Verizon. If not that, I'm sure you have wives who would prefer you made love to them and not Comcast.

Thank you for your time.
