

7521379179.txt

A fast-lane for certain companies is a terrible idea and takes away from what the internet should be - an open network where information is shared. If certain companies are favored, it is lose-lose for the consumer because we have to pay more for poor service and will only get "decent" service through companies that you decide to promote and charge us more for. It should be illegal.