Please reinstate "net neutrality". Let's not go down the road of endless bureaucracy where private citizens are punished by limitations imposed on the internet that are wholly unnecessary, exceedingly expensive, and dare I say, unAmerican in it's purpose.

A reasonable approach that I believe both sides of the issue could find terms with is defining ISP's as "title 2 common carriers". Essentially, treating them as utilities (which they are) and thereby protecting an open internet.

Thank you for your consideration in this matter.
