

7521380701.txt

I want the FCC to maintain Net Neutrality.

The proposed system of handling internet traffic through varied "paths" of data transfer is counterintuitive if we as a nation seek to encourage development of new technology. The proposed fix involving high-speed "lanes" of internet traffic is a short term solution to a long term problem. Small companies and promising breakthroughs yet to emerge will find it more difficult to compete with the companies calling for the proposed changes. Keeping the playing field level is in the interest of all consumers who value a strong marketplace.