

7521380933.txt

I support net neutrality. Living in New York City ISPs like Time Warner and Verizon have virtual monopolies where consumers have no choice on who their ISP is. If we start allowing ISPs to accept paid prioritization, they will be able to shut down startups or established companies that do not want or cannot pay exorbitant fees. And since broadband internet is not a free market, the consumer cannot change and will essentially be forced to pay twice for every service he or she uses. This will inhibit GDP growth, job growth and add yet another expense to the consumer dragging our economy down further.