Dear FCC,

My name is Patricia Davis and I live in Oakland, CA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it users may have fewer options and a less diverse Internet.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

I am appalled that the FCC would even think of siding with industry giants rather than consumers...but I'm not surprised at all. This is an issue with which you must side with the American public and not with corporate cronies. Fail the public on this vital policy decision and I and many other citizens will fight until we assure a fair and open internet for all in this country. You are on the wrong side of history--change this policy now.

Sincerely,

Patricia Davis
