Dear FCC,

My name is Helal Touryalai and I live in Astoria, NY.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The Internet is important to me because, as a new father, I want my children to have the same freedom of information through an open internet and not be limited to what they have access to. I need to know that there will not be barriers to entry for the new ideas and services that will come to the marketplace and that my children will have equal access to all of them.

Sincerely,

Helal Touryalai
