Dear FCC,

My name is Nick Karsos and I live in Towson , MD.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The Internet is important to me because, as a college student, I need to know that there will not be barriers to entry for the new ideas and services that I hope to use in the world, such as scholastic journals and streaming videos. With restrictions I fear I won't have the ability to access information that should be basic human rights.

Sincerely,

Nick Karsos
