Dear FCC,

My name is Joshua Pangel and I live in Pasadena, CA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it I am a business owner of an internet company that would never have gotten off the ground without a neutral internet.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

I was able to start a business on the internet in 2010 because of the open availability to internet resources. Customers from all around the world were able to access my website at the same rates and speed as everyone else in the world.

I now employ 15 people. I am a job creator. I could not create jobs without net neutrality. Future people just like me will not have the same opportunities that I did. America does not bend to the will of corporate greed.

Sincerely,

Joshua Pangel
