Dear FCC,

My name is John Crim and I live in North Bend, WA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

As a serial entrepreneur, I'm worried that a "pay to play" arrangement will favor established, well-funded companies, and will act as an anti competitive force against small innovators.

Sincerely,

John Crim
