

7521482773.txt

I urge Chairman Wheeler to scrap the FCC's plan to allow Internet service providers to charge for preferential treatment. These rules would destroy Net Neutrality, and remove the ability of the internet to be a level playing field for innovation and development. It will also raise prices for consumers, and overall give license for even further abuse of broadband pricing and service in America.

I believe the chairman should throw these rules out, and instead reclassify broadband as a telecommunications service.