Dear FCC,

My name is German Banda and I live in Houston, TX.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it users may have fewer options and a less diverse Internet.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

It is through the internet that I have been able to find vast resources of knowledge that I myself find interesting. I want to learn because of what I have seen on the internet and as a college student I can't imagine a world where accessing information about research, projects or new developments and opinions in science, mathematics, and art are given different treatments depending on the amount of money people hold.

Sincerely,

German Banda
