Dear FCC,

My name is Simon Michael Downey and I live in Toledo, OH.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

America's next great discoveries and inventions may never see the light of day if companies are allowed to pick the winners.

We cannot compete--let alone thrive--if we don't create a level playing field for anyone with a good idea and the will to work hard.

Sincerely,

Simon Michael Downey
