Dear FCC,

My name is Omar Longou and I live in Solon, IA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it users may have fewer options and a less diverse Internet.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The internet must remain a place of equal opportunity for large and small companies. An open internet is very important to me because the internet is the epitome of freedom of information. If some of this information is not treated equally, that goes against one of the greatest principles of this country. It is my right as an American citizen to an open internet.

Sincerely,

Omar Longou
