Dear FCC,

My name is Andrew Hutson and I live in Durham, NC.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

Internet providers have already proven themselves to provide mediocre service at a very high cost. Allowing them to become the gatekeepers between my family and the digital media we enjoy from some terrific start ups - which provide great services at fair prices - is a terrible prospect to consider. Please keep the internet open and fair.

Sincerely,

Andrew Hutson
