Dear FCC,

My name is David Curran and I live in Hilliard, OH.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

I am impressed with the internet experience I have when traveling in other countries, some even considerably less developed than the US.

We deserve better, but in the absence of that we deserve not to have the situation made worse.

Sincerely,

David Curran
