Dear FCC,

My name is Chris Pinchot and I live in Aurora, OH.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The Internet is important to me because, as a college web design student, I know how beautiful the internet really is. Not only is it the commonwealth of human knowledge, but it is an even playing field where great ideas can snowball into even greater things. This regulation will only benefit cooperations, and could ruin this amazing thing we have built. The FCC could take away and/or break one of the most important tools of my generation. Please, don't ruin such an amazing thing.

Sincerely,

Chris Pinchot
