Dear FCC,

My name is Kyle Widdowfield and I live in Delevan, NY.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

The internet needs to stay free and open to everyone. We need to step away from corruption and the ISPs that only care about big business and more money. The internet is more useful than ever before and needed by millions everyday. FCC, we need you to fulfill your duty to protect the everyday user and protect the democracy the United States is supposed to stand for. Limiting the internet and restricting it can only hurt the consumer and people that play key roles in internet as an information exchange service. Without support, everything that the internet can provide could be lost and its usage could be lost to the majority.

Sincerely,

Kyle Widdowfield
