Dear FCC,

My name is Isaac Czapski and I live in Arlington, MA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The internet now is like a window to the rest of the world, a way to collect varied stories and opinions from everyone who cares enough to say something, and a means for any other kind of communication you could want. It can't get any better than that.

Sincerely,

Isaac Czapski
