Dear FCC,

My name is Ralph Sharp and I live in Juneau, WI.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it small business will not be able to have the same access as huge, national companies to consumers.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because I run a small business that wouldn't be able to compete if there was a paid, tiered system of data transmission on the Internet.

The citizens of the United States have agreed that radio, television, phone communications, FAX communications, and all other broadcast and "hard-wired" communications should be regulated and controlled by the FCC. The FCC must designate Internet access as "common carriage" under Title II of the Telecommunications Act.

Sincerely,

Ralph Sharp
