Dear FCC,

My name is A and I live in Mission, TX.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The Internet is important to me because it's changed everything and should continue to freely change. I communicate with friends, family, stay informed, brainstorm, and have tons of resources at my disposal. There shouldn't be a price on information or the public platform the internet has created.

Sincerely,

A
