Dear FCC,

My name is Ben Growdon and I live in Akron, OH.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

No one company or person owns the internet. I should have access to all the same users that Netflix, Youtube, or Amazon has. To control internet traffic like this hurts everyone...well exempt Comcast, Time Warner, and AT&T.

Sincerely,

Ben Growdon
