

Dear FCC,

My name is Michael Gerard Morency and I live in Cincinnati, OH.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

Without the internet, my publishing efforts in being an aspiring author would be severely slowed if not stopped and my ability to express myself in the arts via no restrictions and free advertising would also be taken away. I also aim to do charitable work in selling my art both online and generating publicity for it via the internet when off. This bill is frivolous at best and unethical in general. This will sacrifice, innovation, freedom of speech and idea, and multiple formats of modern american ingenuity in favor of monopolizing money and treating people like discriminated beggars in a world once so free people across the world could find ways to oppose corrupt governments in ways they once could not. This measurement is appalling and it should be known that the people of the so-called "free world" will not stand for it as it goes on, anyway - HOWEVER they may find the necessary ways to circumnavigate censorship and information oppression when the government and their organizations refuse to listen to their own people. This will be a financial burden on both providers and receivers when it finally falls apart from ruthless companies and tech savvy citizens bent on civil disobedience and supplying those less knowledgeable with their own means, AT BEST.

Sincerely,

Michael Gerard Morency
