

7521593780.txt

The Internet cannot be a place of haves and have nots. Companies, such as Google, got their success from the freedom and the equality present on the World Wide Web. If some bits are put on a fast lane, very few consumers will step out of that fast lane of information, and development and innovation will stagnate. This is not a good idea. Preserve Net Neutrality.