

Legal collusion and existing corporate agreements (monopolies) are already too rampant in the telecommunications industry. Such practice must not be allowed to spread further or sink deeper, specifically via auctioning fast lane use to highest bidder and suppressing the end user providing funds to corporations that are bound to throttle the same end user.