The reason the internet works as well as it does for commerce and free speech is that it is largely unregulated by service providers. Net neutrality is something people like me are willing to fight for. If cable companies are allowed to regulate content, this ability will eventually be abused in a manner which has a chilling effect on the free exchange of ideas.

It's obvious that ISP's oppose Title II in order to gain leverage against the FCC. Don't be tricked by this. Support Title II and enforce net neutrality.

Thanks for your time and public service.
