Dear FCC,

My name is Keith and I live in Coconut Creek, FL.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it users may have fewer options and a less diverse Internet.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

We need the internet to remain free to surf. Any limitations or restrictions could potentially cost me more money. Why should a company or government have control over the internet? We need it to remain free to surf, education and censorship begins in the home and I like the ability to utilize content filters according to my personal discretion. Leave the net alone.

Sincerely,

Keith
