Dear FCC,

My name is Matthew Drew and I live in Des Moines, IA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

The Internet is important to me because, as a person with a MS, I need to know that there will not be barriers or entry for any new ideas and services that may be brought to the marketplace. If ISP subscribers have an easier time loading websites of existing companies I will be limited in my ability to interact with the outside world

Sincerely,

Matthew Drew
