Dear FCC,

My name is Yaro Zajac and I live in Lake Hiawatha, NJ.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because ISPs could act as the gatekeepers to their subscribers.

The internet is a great boon to all people, rich or poor. With it, we have access to more information than we've ever had. It is one of the greatest tools ever invented. It is very dangerous to put the power to restrict that information into the hands of corporations. It would be the Dark Ages all over again when the leaders of institutions purposely kept their populations ignorant and illiterate so that they could be the only ones to control how they think. We cannot allow our civilization to fall back into a rut so please don't allow this horrible law to come into being. A law, by the way, that citizens across all political affiliations agree is terrible.

Sincerely,

Yaro Zajac
