Dear FCC,

My name is William Banks and I live in Tallahassee, FL.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it we allow providers to ultimately determine what we can access based on fees paid to them by corps. and special interest groups

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because It gives providers the ability to censor access by using QoS.

The Internet is important to me because it is the one true uncensored access to information we have. Providing the ability to provide faster access to resources also gives ISPs the ability to restrict bandwidth to information to the point it is not accessible at all. Money should not be a determining factor in what people can access on the internet.

Sincerely,

William Banks
