Dear FCC,

My name is Dana Levitt and I live in San Francisco, CA.

Net neutrality, the principle that Internet service providers (ISPs) treat all data that travels over their networks equally, is important to me because without it ISPs could have too much power to determine my Internet experience by providing better access to some services but not others.

A pay-to-play Internet worries me because new, innovative services that can't afford expensive fees for better service will be less likely to succeed.

The Internet is important to me because, as a small business owner, as well as an avid user of the internet for professional and personal reasons, I need to know that there will not be barriers to entry for utilizing the internet as freely as any other company or user. I feel it is pertinent that everyone has an equal chance to compete or succeed. Equal rights is what our country was founded on. Don't betray the American people - and the world! We must be an example of doing the right thing in the world!

Sincerely,

Dana Levitt
